Bardet–Biedl Syndrome: Delayed Diagnosis in a 14-Year-Old Child with End-Stage Renal Disease

Mohammad Rasel\textsuperscript{1}, Ashif Istiak\textsuperscript{1}, Afra Saiara\textsuperscript{1}, Abdullah Al-Jubair\textsuperscript{2}, Shariful Matin\textsuperscript{2}, and Gobinda Roy\textsuperscript{2}

\textsuperscript{1}Bangladesh College of Physicians and Surgeons
\textsuperscript{2}Shaheed Suhrawardy Medical College and Hospital

February 27, 2023

Abstract

Bardet–Biedl syndrome (BBS) is a rare autosomal recessive ciliopathic disorder. Because of its low prevalence and wide spectrum of clinical features, many patients remain undiagnosed. We report a case of a 14-year-old boy with a typical phenotype of BBS who remains undiagnosed until the development of end-stage renal disease.

Hosted file
